New ways to draw more water from the ground

A new source of water for the District could rest 600 to 1000 feet underground in layers of fractured bedrock. SAMDA Inc. has agreed to develop at their own expense wells in fractured bedrock on Little Horse Ranch that lies south of Rancho San Carlos, outside of the District boundaries. If the wells can produce 500 acre-feet of water per year, the District could purchase it from SAMDA for use within the Cal-Am water system at a cost of $800 per acre-foot. The cost of water could be recovered through assessment of a user fee on Cal-Am water bills.

SAMDA, a company specializing in fractured bedrock hydrology, approached District staff in February of this year with a proposal for well exploration based on satellite photos indicating that water might be extracted from the Little Horse Ranch area. At its July 18 meeting, the MPWMD Board authorized staff to enter into a contract with SAMDA for project development from the initial identification of test well sites to the delivery of water into the Cal-Am system.

Little Horse Ranch is within the Monterey County Water Resources Agency (MCWRA) boundaries, so the District must obtain MCWRA's permission to undertake the project. The contract specifies that the project will be abandoned if the MCWRA has not granted authorization by December 31, 1994. Bill Hurst, MCWRA General Manager, stated informally in a letter dated July 15 that the agency had no objections to the development of possible water supplies in the Little Horse Ranch area.

According to the contract, SAMDA is responsible for obtaining all permits and for preparation of environmental documentation related to the project, including an EIR if it is required to answer concerns

Hoopla boasts fun and success

by Pamela Olheiser

Sitting at picnic tables and on the grass in a small oak grove, over 380 people enjoyed the food, drink, dance and friendly visiting at the Trail and Saddle Club in Carmel Valley last Friday night.

The line for food at the Hoopla - as the dinner was named - queued about 50 feet. Over 565 pounds of pig were served to the hungry crowd. Kiwanis vice-president Bruce Michels said that only a plateful of roasted pig was left at the end of the evening.

The line for beer was never quite as long as the food line, however people did drink over 60 gallons of domestic beer and micro-brew

Michels said that no one was upset at the Hoopla, not even the last 10 people who arrived late, missing out on salad, fruit and bread. Michels said many people have told him they had a wonderful time at the event, and he wants to make it a tradition.

"It was a wonderful event and a well-behaved crowd," he said.

Over $2,000 was raised in a silent auction at the Hoopla. The money will fund various youth programs sponsored by the Kiwanis Club. Bids were made on cases of wine, golf packages, garden equipment, ties, and shirts.

Births

On July 25, a son, Sebastian Robles Gorriti, was born to Roxana and Martin Gorriti of Carmel.

On July 27, a daughter, Cassidy Marguerite Keister, was born to Julie O'Hara and Scott Keister of Pacific Grove.

Community Hospital of the Monterey Peninsula announces the following births:

On July 22, a daughter, Rebecca Jean Gerber, was born to Laurie A. Kleinman, M.D., and Richard S. Gerber, M.D. of Carmel Valley.

Resident qualifies for Ironman Triathlon

Stacy Van Horn of Carmel Valley has qualified for the Gatorade Ironman Triathlon World Championship on October 15, 1994 on the Big Island of Hawaii. Nearly 20,000 triathletes from more than 50 countries annually attempt to qualify for triathlon's most prestigious event.

Van Horn, a 31 year old carpenter, placed 10th overall top amateur in the Powerman in Kuai, 2nd overall at Bass Lake in 1993, and 2nd overall in the Software Publishing Biathlon. "To be in the most prestigious and most difficult athletic event in the world, is something I can't pass up," states Van Horn, who has enlisted community support and sponsorship to get to the competition.

The Gatorade Ironman consists of a 2.4-mile ocean swim, 112-mile bike race and 26.2-mile run, to be completed within 17 hours. Training for the race typically requires 18 to 24 hours per week for six to eight months to develop the stamina and endurance needed to complete the 140.6-mile event.

The Gatorade Ironman Triathlon began in 1978 with only 15 competitors. Its explosive growth required race organizers to implement qualifying procedures in 1983. The race field now is limited to 1,400 contestants due to safety concerns and the championship nature of the event. Organizers credit much of the race's success to more than 4,000 volunteers and many corporate sponsors who donate their time and money toward the event.

Streets is the newly-opened Avenue Restaurant. Executive chef Scott Kloster said the Avenue, which is housed in a Comstock-style building, epitomizes downtown Carmel.

Opened on June 27, the Avenue boasts a menu of what Kloster calls "new-American cuisine." Kloster completed his culinary studies at the Hunter's Club in Edmonton, Alberta. He finished his studies in Quebec City and since has worked in various hotel restaurants, including the Four Seasons in San Francisco. He focused his learning on classical French Haute Cuisine and devised all of the recipes on the Avenue's menu.

"There are many different influences on our recipes," he said. "There is a bit of Asian influence and plenty of French and Mediterranean."

Kloster describes the decor of the restaurant as "old-world European." The flagstone floor continues through the front dining room. The biscuit-colored stone walls are decorated with built-in ceramics. The interior is traditional European style, from the Venus fountain in the restaurant courtyard to the basket of dried wildflower ers and sunflowers that rests on the full bar.

The historic building was originally designed by Edward G. Kuster in 1925 for Bohemian writer Harry Leon. Leon paid $8,000 for the building which is now valued at over 2 million dollars.

Kloster said the restaurant has been packed every night, with bookings for up to 115 people. He says the two most popular seafood dishes the restaurant offers are the sanddabs with orange pistachio cous-cous and the seabass with charred pepper sauce.

Waiter Rick Beidoun said the popular wines at the Avenue are Shalone's chardonnay, Talbot's chardonnay, and Georis' Cabernet Sauvignon and Merlot wines.

The Avenue features heart healthy recipes which are marked on the menu with an asterisk. Kloster also said the Avenue tries to be accommodating to specific diet requests, although he said he had to turn down one request for crab cakes without crab. "I don't think that would have worked out very well," he said.

Kloster does not rely on specials to round out the menu at the Avenue. He said the menu stands well alone. All of the main courses are served with vegetables. The sanddabs, for example, are served with vegetables that are roasted in balsamic vinegar, and the seabass is served with baby summer squash and braised artichokes.

The menu also offers a variety of appetizers. Assistant chef David Rangel, who completed his culinary studies at the California Culinary Academy in San Francisco, helped create the recipe for roasted corn and crab soup. Kloster said this soup has become quite a house specialty.

All dishes are made daily with fresh ingredients. Kloster says he buys most of the vegetables for the restaurant from local farms. The seafood is from all over the country. The oysters are from Chesapeake Bay and the Salmon is from the Atlantic, he said.

Owners Jack Hakim (who also owns Scandia Restaurant in Carmel) and Nadj Kashfi may both be found at the restaurant seven days each week for up to 15 hours per day. They greet customers, supervise and keep employees working in cooperation, which Kloster said is a prerequisite for success in the multimillion dollar Carmel restaurant business.

"I want people to know that we are up and running," Kloster said. "Stick with us because there is much more to come."

FROM WHERE I STAND BY LEE PHELPS

WHAT'S NEXT? BY MEL VERCOE

I think President Clinton's new Chief of Staff made one heck of a mistake, adding his voice to the "let's invade Haiti" idea.

I first met Leon Panetta in 1986. Urged him to run for Congress to unseat a right-wing incumbent, who, along with a lot of anti-communist paranoids and draft-exempt flag wavers, had supported our totally senseless Vietnam involvement from Day One.

Leon turned out to be an excellent congressman for our district. With his management and persuasive skills he soon became a highly skilled porkbarreller and arm twister. Nothing wrong with that. Our district got just oodles of benefits that other districts can only dream about. But his skills also got him the White House Chief of Staff job, a great chance to become either Vice President or President in the 1996 election coming up.

Both jobs will be wide open. Neither Al Gore, too polite to speak out loud, nor Bill Clinton, up to his ears in both personal and policy problems, will stand a chance. But, alas, Leon's first main assignment requires that he push the Haiti invasion to a whole lot of concerned voters out here in the boondocks, almost none of whom are dumb enough to actually believe that it is in America's national interests to add the confused Haiti mess to an oversupply of apparently unsolvable problems we already face right here. Don't do it, Leon. It's a trap, probably set up by Dole, Gingrich, and Robertson, or it could be a gimmick to "get something going" to benefit some defense industries about to run out of contracts. Most likely of all, it was designed to divert attention from what appears to be total confusion in the White House.

Take a couple of weeks off, Leon. Tell them you got the flu. Let Albright and Christopher handle it, and get the blame for adding Haiti to our long list of welfare problems.

Can State voters impose term limits on their delegation to the U.S. Congress? That's the question the U.S. Supreme Court now has agreed to answer, by hearing State of Arkansas v. Hill (Case NY 931828). Arguments will be heard later this year (1994), with a decision expected sometime during 1995. At issue is the question of whether state-imposed limits on ballot access (denying a place on the printed ballot to any member of Congress who has served a specified number of terms) is, in fact, an added "qualification" for holding office. Ballot access historically has been adjudged within the power of states under the "... time, place, and manner of holding elections ..." clause of the U.S. Constitution, so long as such access did not constitute a discriminatory application of that power. If the high court were to decide that denying ballot status to serving members of Congress is, in fact, an additional "qualification" for holding office, all fifteen (15) states which imposed such tenure-limiting measures in 1990-92 elections would be affected, and their initiatives overturned.

California is one of the fourteen states in which voters, in the November, 1992, general election, enacted "ballot access term limits" laws, specifying that once a U.S. Senator had served two terms (12 years), and a U.S. Representative three terms (or six years), their names could not again be printed on a ballot until an equivalent span of years had intervened (Proposition 164). If the U.S. Supreme Court invalidates the Arkansas ballot access (or term limited) law, ours will also be nullified; if the Arkansas law is upheld, Prop. 164 will remain in effect for California's delegation to Congress.

Whatever the Supreme Court's decision in the Arkansas case, there will be no impact whatever on our voter initiative imposing term limits on state-level legislators and elected officials. Proposition 140 (1990) has already been submitted to and upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court. Lee A. Phelps is the founder of ACTIV - Alliance of California Taxpayers and Involved Voters - a nonprofit, nonpartisan, and all-volunteer statewide organization: PO Box 330, Aptos, CA 95001.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

Regarding your July 28 article on steelhead, the Carmel River Steelhead Association (CRSA) is to be commended for its efforts to restore the steelhead resource. However, it is not correct or fair to state that the steelhead are being saved solely due to CRSA efforts. The Monterey Peninsula Water Management District staff, California Department of Fish and Game biologists, and volunteers from fishing groups, including CRSA, have all helped to preserve the species.

I was disappointed that your reported listed perceived inadequacies in the District's steelhead program, but did not interview District staff to respond or describe our many positive actions to save the fish. I encourage you to read the District's annual reports, which document successful rescue and planting of thousands of fish, spawning gravel enhancement, improved fish passage, spillway modifications, and negotiations with Cal-Am to provide more river flow.

Certain facilities described by CRSA were not planned to be built until this year, and District staff are moving forward as fast as possible. Like any other project, fish facilities require many federal, state, and county permits prior to construction; the permit processes have resulted in delays beyond our control.

The good news is that steelhead counts are up despite 1994 being a dry year. For example, over 11,000 steelhead have been rescued this year, which is greater than the previous three years combined. This improvement is due primarily to the efforts of dedicated District staff and other mentioned above. No other agency has contributed more time, money and staff to restoring the Carmel River steelhead than the Water Management District. We are proud of our efforts and our successes to date.

Sincerely,
Fran Farina,
Carmel Valley
MPWMD Vice-Chair

BOOKS 'N SUCH

BY ARABY COLTON

The Transformation of War
by Martin Van Creveld
MacMillan, Inc. $22.95

Nothing like a book to scare you to death for light summer reading. This book, by an internationally acclaimed military historian, who teaches history at the Jewish University in Jerusalem, is both upsetting, and heartening.

Van Creveld's thesis is that war as a rational method for achieving national objectives is no longer realistic.

After a long and detailed description of the development of war-making, from the pseudo-wars of our hunter-gatherer ancestors, through Greece and Rome, through the Middle Ages, when armored knights lined up and smashed at each other, to the total war of World Wars I and II, Van Creveld comes down to what we have now -- the incredible expenditure of money and resources by the super powers, in preparation for war with each other.

But, believe it or not, nuclear weapons have made, in Van Creveld's judgement, war between the great powers obsolete. Any war started between great powers is bound to turn into nuclear war, and that, as is universally acknowledged, is the suicide of the human race.

So, what we have is such enormous powers as our Pentagon, planning and preparing, and impoverishing us, for a war that will never happen.

What we do have is a new kind of war - guerilla wars, the violent, irrational uprising of ethnic groups, religious sects, just plain banditry, terrorism. We've even returned to trying to take out national leaders, such as Libya's Khadafi, and Germany's Erwin Rommel, Cuba's Castro.

But tanks, and long range missiles, and armored personnel carriers, and heavy bombers don't work. Witness Viet Nam, Cambodia, Bosnia-Serbia, Lebanon, El Salvador. In many of the so-called low-conflict wars being fought around the world people are fighting for what they consider their very existence, and they just don't give up. Witness Algeria. Every dead body just made the Algerians fight harder, and France had to finally give up.

Of course, as Van Creveld points out, war is not merely a means to an end, it is for many, an end in itself, the most exciting, the most satisfying experience of their lives. Wars are also the salving of pride. Witness George Bush's Persian Gulf War. Hussein is still there, the tyrannical government is still in Kuwait, but George did prove that he wasn't a wimp.

War is obsolete. That's Van Creveld's final point. We just have to attend to our real problems, poverty, principally, and stop thinking in terms of violence.

Less than 30 miles from Carmel Valley Village, Arroyo Seco provides spectacular panoramas, warm water swimming and camping. The distant location makes it a favorite for local youths. Difficult access to many of the best "spots" on the water makes it an ideal retreat on those days when the coastal beaches are buried under Carmel's famous fog hood. Travel along the dirt road past the camping area is slow and tedious, but worth every mile.

In spite of the best efforts of Rangers and concerned users of the vast Arroyo Seco park, litter abounds - beer cans, fast food debris, napkins and more. The trash is not overwhelming, but as a German tourist put it, "It is too bad that your people do not show more respect for such a beautiful place..." photo - CVS staff

SHIN SPLINTS

In the past the term "shin splints" described a runner who had pain anywhere between the knee cap and the ankle. However, since the late 1960s and early 1970s, shin splints have come to mean pain either in the inner or outer lower two-thirds of the lower leg. Three other problems stimulate pain in these locations: periostitis, tendonitis, and stress fracture. Careful examination is necessary to separate these conditions. A good diagnosis will provide the basis for successful treatment.

The term shin splints is applied to inflammatory conditions of the muscle-tendon junctions in the lower leg. The musculotendinous junctions is where the muscle tissue and tendon tissue merge. The tendinous tissue then proceeds across a joint to attach to bone. However, as stated above, shin splints is an injury to the muscle-tendon junction. In brief, shin splints cause damage which results in inflammation, scar formation, and weakened muscle and tendon.

Shin splints, an over use injury, has three contributing causes. It may result from muscle weakness, anatomic malalignment, or errors in training technique. These produce stress within the tissues which must be reduced for proper healing.

Athletes who run approximately 3 to 20 miles per week are the most likely to suffer from shin splints. This is because recreational runners are more prone to utilize poor running technique and poor equipment. When a runner increases his or her training distance or speed too rapidly the runner simply overuses his or her body. The new distance or speed of running may not allow enough time for tissues to adapt. Common training errors include: excessive mileage, rapid increase in mileage, intensive interval training, inadequate warm-up, faulty stretching, or improper (hard) running surface.

Prevention is the best cure for shin splints. Keep in mind that shin splints are the result of muscle overload or overuse. Employ measures such as adequate stretching, use of correct footwear, proper training techniques, and avoidance of training on hard surfaces.

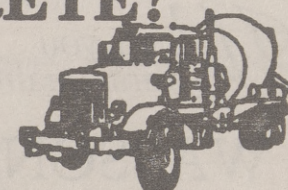

Once injured, careful rehabilitation is necessary to lessen the risk of re-injury. Tightness of the calf muscles may lead to early fatigue of the calf muscle and subsequent overload of the muscles on the front of the lower leg. An incline board for calf muscle stretching is helpful.

Heel lifts can be used temporarily to take tension off the calf muscles. Ice massage, compression, and elevation are effective treatments for the inflammatory aspects of shin splints. In the severe case, rest for 3 to 5 days (sometimes longer) may be required followed by gradual return to training. Alternate exercise activities, for cardiovascular fitness, may include swimming, bicycling (pushing with the heel), or circuit weight training. When training is resumed, maintenance strength and flexibility programs need to continue throughout the athlete's running career.

Would you share your home for help with chores?

The Alliance on Aging's Homesharing Program, funded by the City of Monterey, is now in its third year on the Monterey Peninsula including Carmel Valley. The procedure is simple... the staff interview homeseekers and homeproviders to determine their needs.

Most participants in Homesharing are seniors living on fixed incomes who either need reasonably priced housing or who need to supplement their retirement income by renting out a portion of their home. In addition to financial assistance, Homesharing offers the safety, camaraderie and the mutual support of a family-like housing environment to both parties.

In addition, both the provider and seeker of housing may choose to exchange services as part of their unique arrangement.

In the past few months, matches have been made all over the Peninsula. A young man is living with a female senior citizen. He provides services for her, such as shopping, running errands, and any outdoor work that requires lifting. They share at least one meal per day and the cooking 3-4 times per week.

According to both of them, they have a very open, comfortable relationship and have become good friends. As a matter of fact, the man enjoys playing with the lady's 11 year old black lab mix. They both feel that homesharing is an invaluable service that the Alliance on Aging provides.

A single mom with two young girls was looking for a "grandma" for the girls. This was an unusual request and the Homesharing Program was able to place a senior citizen in this home. The senior has become a member of the family and is included in all the family outings.

The family loves listening to the stories about where she has been and what she has done in her life. Both parties are very pleased with the homesharing arrangement and would recommend it to others.

For more information regarding the Homesharing Program, please call Alliance on Aging, Marlene, 646-1458.

Steelhead program continues on river

Water Management District staff have constructed a temporary steelhead rearing facility, a netpen made of fine-meshed nylon net suspended from a floating frame with a walkway along the perimeter. The frame and netpen are portable, modular units that can be expanded if additional holding space is needed in the future.

Currently, fish are being held in the netpen at the plunge pool below San Clemente Dam, where they will be fed and cared for until conditions are safe for their eventual release downstream.

The netpen cost about $7000. A permanent fish rearing facility, to be constructed in the Sleepy Hollow area, should be in use by December, 1994.

Water from page one about project impacts. SAMDA has already received permits from the Monterey County Health Department for test well drilling.

The project will be completed in three phases: (1) Exploration, drilling test wells and evaluating water production, (2) Documentation, completion of environmental documentation and preparation for water delivery into the MPWMD, and (3) Operation, construction of a water delivery system and development of the water purchase agreement. The District could choose not to proceed with Documentation and Operation phases if the project were determined to be "infeasible to implement due to political, logistical, economical, or environmental reasons."

Following the July 18 Board meeting, concerns about the project were expressed by Big Sur area residents. Thus, on August 15, the Directors will be asked to reconsider their decision regarding contract approval.

Free Report Reveals Secret To Getting The Highest Price When You Sell Home!

Carmel Valley, CA - With all of the ups and downs in the real estate market over the past several years, finally there is some good news for home sellers.

A FREE new market report has just been released that provides valuable information about how to position your home in the marketplace so you get the highest price possible.

For years, real estate agents have relied on local market figures to advise homeowners on how to determine the right selling price for their home. The problem is, these figures don't give you the total picture you need to get the highest price for your home when you sell!

It's not commonly known that, just understanding what is going on in your immediate neighborhood doesn't give you the complete information you need to get the maximum price for your home... or get it sold on time. Yet, too often sellers make this mistake.

Now, thanks to a new computer system, home sellers can get extremely accurate, up-to-the minute information that will help them get the highest price for their home when they sell."

The FREE REPORT is titled "How To Sell Your Home For The Highest Price", and also includes a computerized market report. If your home is currently listed for sale with a real estate broker, there are some restrictions on what information can be provided.

However, if you are about to put your home on the market for sale, the complete report can be provided to you without charge. The computerized market report alone could save you thousands when you sell your home!

To get a copy of the report, you can call the message line below for a free recorded message and written copy of the report. Call now and find out what most buyers are hoping you never read about!

McPherson gets teachers support

Assemblyman Bruce McPherson announced that he has been endorsed by the California Teachers Association (CTA) for reelection to the California State Assembly in the 27th District.

"I am honored to have the support of the California Teachers Association and its many members in the 27th Assembly District," said McPherson. "The support of the California Teachers Association is another example of the broad base of support that I have in my campaign for reelection."

The California Teachers Association indicated that their support for Assemblyman McPherson was based on his strong record in the Assembly on education issues and on his past history of support for education.

"The California Teachers Association is supporting Bruce McPherson for the State Assembly in the 27th District because he is an independent legislator who has consistently supported education and teacher," said Dorothy Lund, Co-Chair of the CTA's Political Assessment Team.

The California Teachers Association is the largest educational association in the State of California with over 235,000 members.

REAL ESTATE BY RAND SMITH

In real estate, when it boils right down to it, everybody uses the same standard contracts to list a house for sale. There is probably no other industry where so many competitors try so hard to distinguish themselves as different and unique, yet have so little actual deviation in contractual obligations.

What makes some agents successful and others unsuccessful is, simply how they deliver.

Let me introduce you briefly to Andrew Lacy, Carlos Justo, Fred Wilson and Loretta Krumbholz. These are agents who really deliver. They're from (respectively) Spartanburg, S.C., Coconut Grove, Fla., Palm Springs and Prescott, Arizona.

Andrew Lacy is the politest and most unassuming guy I have ever met. At first he reminds me of white bread - nothing offensive and nothing exciting. He speaks with deference, in a slow southern drawl peppered with "yes'ems," "yessirs" and "y'als." He wears thick glasses, too. Before he entered real estate, he was a marine. As a marine, he was assigned to be a personal body guard to both President Carter, and Reagan! When he talks about real estate, he ignites!

Last year he sold 187 houses. The year before, 75, and in 1990 only 30. His goal for this year is 360 homes sold! How does he do it? Staying focused, he says. By using his time more efficiently each day, he can double his production. "Please don't be offended by anything I say," he begins with his clients. "This is strictly business, and I won't be offended if you don't choose me as your agent -- but you absolutely need my help if you want to sell this house."

He knows that the public needs his advice. He is brutal with his honesty. Andrew is honest with himself as well. He won't spend any time at all with anyone who is not motivated to sell. He knows if he did, he wouldn't be able to service them properly. He won't even look at a house unless the owner has already agreed to list it! So his clients get what they want - their houses sold. He's so polite, I'm sure no one is offended, either.

Carlos Justo is a 37-year-old Cuban immigrant who sells big homes to the rich and famous like Sylvester Stallone and Madonna. His average sales price is at $1.5 million. It doesn't take a lot of sales for agents like Carlos to be real successful. Nearly all "high end" agents around the country peak out around 25 to 30 million dollars in production, which means that the best agents sell 10 to 15 homes. His goal is 100 sales!

To do this, Carlos showed me his detailed business plan - the numbers are staggering! He has hired a full time personal consultant to monitor everything he does.

"I'm a showman," he says, admitting he needs people to manage the details. But Carlos knows the particulars on virtually every estate property around Miami. He personally calls 15 to 20 "very influential" people every day, prospecting for new business. His goals also include preparation to expand back into Cuba. If Cuba opens up, Carlos Justo will be a major player in real estate there, and will probably be looked back upon as one of the "leaders" who helped restore that country back into prosperity. Carlos isn't a dreamer, he's just a big thinker.

Fred Wilson used to be a pro tennis player. He never became a household name, but he traveled the world on the pro circuit trying to become one. He has been in real estate now for only two years. He sold 130 homes last year. That's as many homes as the next three next best agents in his office combined! He has changed the famous Nike axiom from "Just do it" to "Actually do it."

The most important aspect to his success, he says, comes from "establishing the level of commitment" to his clients. He has designed a program he calls the "Fred Express." Everyone of his clients is given a gold "credit card" which enables them to get discounts at stores and businesses throughout Palm Springs.

To actually implement this and make it succeed requires a huge commitment, particularly as a real estate agent, not a marketer. Fred is always focusing on opportunities. Each new client may become another merchant, who in turn wants more business, and therefore helps promote the program. Fred is now rapidly becoming a household name.

Loretta Krumbholz is the most courageous agent I've met. This last year has been "the worst and the best year of my life," she says. She will sell well over 100 houses this year, which is her best year ever. She has had this success, even though she was diagnosed with cancer.

Through the trauma, and the chemotherapy, and the demands of her career and her family, she has found herself, spiritually, in the best place she has ever been. "I wish I had cancer sooner," she said, "so I would've been smarter, faster."

Loretta has learned about the incredible power of belief. "You have to be a host to sickness," physically, or mentally she says. And you can become well, no matter what your circumstances. Wellness is as much a state of mind as anything else. No matter what is currently happening to her body, Loretta is the healthiest person in real estate today.

Honesty. Goals. Commitment. Belief. These are words that aren't written on the listing contract. However, agents like Andrew, Carlos, Fred and Loretta make sure that's what is being delivered.

Report

Republican congressional candidate Bill McCampbell has been endorsed by three important local law enforcement associations. Endorsing McCampbell's bid for the 17th Congressional seat are: the Monterey County Chief Law Enforcement Officers Association, the Santa Cruz Police Officers Association and the King City Police Sergeants Association.

Valley Finance

by Douglas Pease

Some of us remember the first TV sets in our neighborhood. On our street, Mr. Ricker sent away for a kit after Christmas 1947, soldered pieces every evening after work, and by July we could stop in and watch the Red Sox on a three-inch screen.

What if my family had bought stock in the TV industry as a result of inspecting Mr. Ricker's working TV set? What an investment opportunity that would have been!

Such opportunities are available today, but the great abundance of opportunities are now outside the U.S. . . . in 1970 U.S. markets traded two-thirds of total world stock market capitalization. Today, it's the other way around: U.S. markets account for only one-third of the total.

What if we could return in time, and arrange for a TV corporation to sell today's model TV set to Mr. Ricker in 1947. A 21" color model. With VCR, tapes, and a broadcast inventory of 70 years of MGM movies? Would that TV corporation's stock be an investment opportunity?

That's what is happening now, as today's technology is being introduced into the neighborhoods of emerging countries: Burger King and McDonald's, Coke and Pepsi, cellular phones, Bic pens, Gillette shave lotion, Sony Walkmans.

Hong Kong has been the developed world's top performing stock market the past three years in a row . . . up 117% in 1993. Finland's stock market was in second place for 1993 . . . up 83%. Then New Zealand . . . up 70%. Then Singapore/Malaysia . . . up 68%.

Global investing is serious business: have you started?
